Lucas Alves Costa

Paraíso

September 9 – December 10, 2017

Galeria Palácio is pleased to present Paraíso, the first solo exhibition by Lucas Alves Costa with the gallery. A film with the same title of the exhibition and a painting directly related to the film are presented. About the film Paraíso (2017), Lucas Alves Costa says: "Synthesize the intrinsic chain of relationships established between human beings and space, exploring the role of each variable present in the spatial scenario and broadening the notion of complexity of this network."

The film Paraíso portrays the artist Chiaki Mihara producing a painting in an environment of Atlantic Forest with abundant flora and fauna, in the south of Brazil. Chiaki Mihara originated a rereading of the environment's composition in a watercolor painting during the film. Paraíso proposes a narrative between human presence in an environment of abundant nature and his perception of the spatial composition. Implicitly, Lucas Alves Costa introduces a personal point of view to a spatial identity representation of Brazil — in its essence — from a synthesis picture-perfect place.

Produced by Chiaki Mihara during the film Paraíso, the painting Mata Atlântica (2017) is presented in the exhibition. The painting is interpreted by Chiaki Mihara as a portrait visually expressive to the variations of the environment, far from the static, linear, inert, and unchanging space concept— running water, light change, and movement of vegetation.
