Emerson da Silva
O Regime dos Ventos
April 15 – May 28, 2018

Galeria Palácio is pleased to present O Regime dos Ventos, Emerson da Silva's second solo exhibition with the gallery. A film with a homonymous title of the exhibition, three photographs, and a photograph are presented.

In the film O Regime dos Ventos (2018), Emerson da Silva documented the wind as an agent in the landscape formation in a coastal region in southern Brazil. On one side, sand dunes, on the other side, the Atlantic Ocean. Amid this scenario, the buildings of the region's inhabitants are constantly buried, little by little, due to the sand carried by continuous wind actions. In an adaptation to the local weather conditions, a wind farm was built in the region.

Taking as a starting point for the conception of the film the notion that the human–nature relations are complex in origin, Emerson da Silva presents in O Regime dos Ventos a systemic approach that symbolizes, circularly and relationally, the spatial reality of a coastal region in southern Brazil. The landscape transformations of different scenarios and the consequences that the human–nature relationship produced in the region's spatiality, are explored. Emerson da Silva structured the film in three relational spheres: (1) coastal dunes formed by wind; (2) burial of buildings in areas of action of the natural course of the wind; (3) the adaptation of the human being to the climatic conditions of the space in which he lives through the construction of a wind farm.

Dunas, Torre Eólica, Soterramento (2018) presents three photographs arranged as a triptych. Emerson da Silva synthesizes the narrative proposed in the film from photographs that portray the three central subjects of O Regime dos Ventos.

A photograph titled Parque Eólico Litorâneo (2018) presents the wind farm documented in the film O Regime dos Ventos portrayed at night.

Emerson da Silva (1988, Porto Alegre, Brazil) lives and works in Porto Alegre.
